THEN GRUDGE YE NOT

(Awarded First Prize in Victory Poem Contest)

Since neither word of ours can raise
Nor prayer of ours restore,
The dead lost souls of other days,
This legion "gone before,"
How shall we grudge the yellow gold
To beg their foemen down,
Where the Red Prussians pitiless hold
Sacked city, pillaged town?

But if some faith of ours could know
Some prayer of ours awake,
The dear lost, laid of long ago,
That perished for our sake;
And at the dusk their spirits dim
Come whispering sweet and far
From that fair land beyond the rim
Of things that, mortal are—

If such could be, would these not ask
(Vague voices down the wind)
That we should help—ah, humble task—

The comrades left behind?
Then grudge we not the yellow gold
To beg their foemen down,
Where the Red Prussians pitiless hold
Sacked city, pillaged town.

MARSHAL FOCH'S MASTERY OF WAR

(By Frank H. Simonds)

Whatever be the future course, of events it is no longer to be doubted that the contest which ended in the breaking of the Hindenburg line was the decisive battle of the world. The consequences of this battle are yet only partially realized, the extent of the German retreat, still to be disclosed, but the magnitude of the triumph is patent, and it has been promptly followed by a German proposal for an armistice which confesses the loss of the war, although it does not yet foreshadow unconditional surrender.

We have then to review one of the few enduring military triumphs of human history, a battle whose consequences are already as great as that of "Battleground of the Nations," the contest at Leipsic which settled the fate of the Napoleonic empire. Germany's dream of world power was as certainly terminated in northern France as was that of the great French emperor more than a century ago in Saxony.

This battle for which perhaps the name of the Hindenburg line, the geographical objective which was attained and passed, supplies the best title, extended over a front twice as extensive as that of the first Marne hitherto, its greatest in history; it was fought by no less than four million men; it was immediately followed by the evacuation of more than seven thousand square miles of French and Belgian territory and a retreat as unmistakable and perhaps so extended as that of Napoleon after Leipsic.

FOCH IN STRONG POSITION

The battle of the Hindenburg line opened September 26. On this day the Germans between the sea and the Meuse were substantially on the ground which they had occupied at the beginning of their offensive March 21. Only west and north of Lille and south of Laon did they hold any salient ground which had not been in their hands in the spring, while only east of Cambrai had they lost any important positions, likewise in their hands in March.

On all this front of nearly two hundred miles the Germans stood behind a system of defense which had been elaborated over two and in some places over four years. They possessed all the points of vantage and from Arras to Soissons they had before them that desert created by the famous Hindenburg retreat of 1917, which challenged the best efforts of allied engineers to construct lines of communication for their advancing armies. Behind the German line was an undeviated course with lines of communication developed during four years of preparation.

Between March 21 and September 26 the Germans had tried and failed to win the war by a colossal offensive. Their failure had cost them more prisoners and many guns, but they had not yet lost more prisoners or more guns than they had taken in the successful phases of their offensive. It may even be doubted if their total losses were much greater than those of their foe, although their practice of selecting the best elements in their armies and grouping them in storm units had been taken in the recent event, and did not as the event proved occur during the course of the tactical battle itself.

It was to inflict a decisive, defeat which once and for all put an end to the idea that a war of positions would have no other termination than a dead lock. He had to win such a victory as to prove that an old-fashioned, decisive military triumph could occur even in contemporary warfare.

In so he had to do exactly what the allied commanders fighting Napoleon had to do—he had to defeat his antagonism in such fashion as to demonstrate that the ultimate and irreducible foe for the gray, foggy, and neither impossible nor improbable. He had to break the legend of the invincible German machine, now on the defensive as the allies of 1913 had to break the Napoleonic legend. This all of it he did accomplish between September 26 and October 15. In that time the whole opinion of the civilized world, Teutonic and non-Teutonic, was brought to the common point of recognition that Germany had lost the war treacherously, and all that could occur in the future would be the victorious exploitation of the battle of the Hindenburg line.

The Verpes Led Off

In solving his grandiose tactical problems, Foch opened his battle on the flanks, reserving his main thrust for the center and for the appropriate moment. Thus September 26, it was Liggett's 1st American army, in conjunction with Gouraud's 4th French army, which delivered the blow on the German left, while King Albert's Belgian army and Flanders' 2nd British army delivered the blow on the German right.

The Franco-American blow resulted in a swift advance by the Americans north of Verdun, the capture of Montfaucon and a dozen other towns which were on the way between the Meuse and between the Meuse and the Argonne, villages famous in the campaign for Verdun of 1916. One immediate effect of this advance was to break the German domination of the Paris Chalons Verdun railway, which had been cut by indirect fire for more than four years. Gouraud, on his side of the Argonne pushed forward until the night of September 26, the battle of Champagne of September 1915, which had been one day earlier.

Drew in Hun Retreats

This advance was then halted as was inevitable because it was an unmediated threat to all the German lines of communication between Alsace Lorraine and the Reims Laon front and particularly to the Metz-Monster Valenciennes railway. Laenderhof had to send reserves to the endangered front at once and these reserves on their arrival succeeded not in stopping either the French or the Americans, but in slowing down the advance. The purpose of the operation had, however, been already achieved by the strain laid upon German reserves.

British Wars His "Old Guard"

Having made Ludendorff anxious for both his flanks, Foch was now ready for his master stroke. Already the British between the Scarpe and the Somme, behind the Douai and St. Quentin, had been active, had pushed forward and taken many valuable "jumping off" places. But on October 8, on the front between Cambrai and the Somme, the British, the British French army between St. Quentin and the Oise, three British armies, those of Horne, Byng and Rawlinson, struck. What happened was the greatest British achievement in all the centuries of British warfare, on the continent.

All the past disappointments, were banished; all the old defeats were avenged; in three days the British drove straight through the 12 miles of the Hindenburg line, on the front where it was strongest, and pushed on into the open country beyond. By October 12 they were in LeCateau, St. Quentin had fallen, the fall of Cambrai was assured, the old battlefield of first Cambrai where Smith-Dorrien, half of Sir John French's expedition army was almost destroyed, had been crushed by the victorious British. The Hindenburg line was a memory. This fact, too, should be emphasized, that the British thrust was the final thrust of the whole battle.

In the decisive battle of the world the Germans had been upon the defensive. They had been accustomed to call upon their Old Guard, and the British had made the response of the Old Guard. For the British this battle was the third battle of Cambrai, the first in the vast battle of Foch, but a defeat for the world, the decisive stroke in the winning of the war.

Hail's Blow Seized It

The consequences of the British success were immediately enormous. Their own advance, was checked a few miles south of Valenciennes, on the Meuse, where they had broken the LeCateau, but they had been exactly like that of the operative force, on the flanks. They had accomplished their purpose, they had broken the Hindenburg line, they had driven a wedge deeply into the German front, they were immediately encircling the last of the German line, the last of the new salient to the south between the Oise and the Aisne, including the St. Quentin line. The British were facing Reims, in a desperate posture. The center had performed

Jack Canuck—Storekeeper

IN Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Jack Canuck is running an immense produce business these days.

He has millions of bushels of grain; boat loads of flour; vast herds of cattle, sheep and pigs; butter, cheese and poultry and other food supplies by the trainload.

The customers at his counter are Great Britain, France, and Italy, whose credit is unquestionable, but who are just now short of cash. So Jack Canuck in order to sell his goods must give his customers credit until the war is won.

It is just the same situation that confronts every storekeeper who gives farmers credit until their crops are harvested.

So Jack Canuck borrows money on Victory Bonds in order to give credit to his customers.

He pays good interest on Victory Bonds. He offers as security all Canada and everything contained therein.

By issuing Victory Bonds Jack Canuck keeps his big business going—and all the money he borrows from Canadians he spends in Canada.

We must buy Victory Bonds in order that the business of Jack Canuck shall remain prosperous and healthy.

We must buy Victory Bonds in order that our brave and gallant army shall have food, clothing and ammunition to win complete Victory over the enemies of our country.

its mission, it was time for the tanks to come to life, again.

Once more the Americans and the British, aided by the British army facing Reims, struck northward, which followed was a swift German retreat between the Argonne and the Meuse, the surrender of all the positions held since the retreat from the first Marne in September 1914, including the famous fort, above Reims, from which the aerial had been ruined and the city destroyed. Less precipitately, by no less inevitably, the Germans began a retreat between the Oise and the Aisne which cleared Laon and the St. Gobain forest, and surrendered that the British in northern France had been bled.

In three weeks Foch had upset the equilibrium of the whole German front from the sea to the Meuse. He had pushed the German line back in the north of Reims, and in the center, central stronghold on which all their line in northern France had been based.

army in a battle which they had accepted on their own ground, prepared by them over four years. The ultimate consequences of this success were still problematical; no man could say exactly at what point the Germans would undertake to make a stand, but it was already certain that they would be unable to stand within French territory: the liberation of France had been accomplished; the advancing allied armies were welcomed by thousands of French men and women, who had endured four years of slavery; for them the long night was over.

A Three Week Job

Such is its rough form was Foch's supreme victory. It was no won over a demoralized enemy. On the contrary, the Germans fought with great persistence and bravery. It was no the consequence of a collapse of their high command, for even after the retreat, the German army was still a formidable force. The German army was still a formidable force. The German army was still a formidable force.

most clearly cut victories in all military history, and for the Germans it was a defeat, which terminated all hope of merely winning the war, but of imposing a deadlock. After the battle of the Hindenburg line the certainty of a military decision, if not anticipated by a German surrender, was unmistakable.

The trouble with all previous allied offensives had lain in the fact that all resources were concentrated on a narrow front and the concentration betrayed to the enemy the direction in which the attack was coming and enabled him to make a counter concentration. The fault with the German offensive of this year lay in the fact that they consumed one colossal blow, and when that failed to achieve a decision they had to stop and prepare a new blow, giving the enemy equal opportunity to prepare to recover from the first blow.

The merit of Foch's strategy has lain in his ability to expand the pressure over a wide front and multiply his potential thrust so that the enemy was never able to get his breath and never able to anticipate in which direction the next blow was to fall. In a word, you have the difference between a brute and a man trained in self defense. The brute undertook to destroy his antagonist by a few terrible blows.

Fish Catching in Canada

All over Canada people are eating fish in greater quantities than ever known in this country before. The average increase being estimated at 100 per cent. National Fish Day, October 21st, was well observed throughout Canada. The increased demand will increase the supply, for there are plenty of fish in Canadian waters. If people will only ask their dealers to order them.

Keep Your Potatoes Dry

So, this year potatoes are dry before you put them away this fall. If you store in a pit, look to the weather and make sure of good drainage. If you store in the cellar have a false floor to allow air to circulate, and leave a few inches of air space next to the wall.

Farmers are Stopping the Profit-Eating Leaks This Year

Comparatively few farmers fall or lose heavily because of misfortune such as fire, wind or drought. The majority of failures and losses are from combined little leaks, and it is the many little leaks that are being studied and stopped.

HERE ARE SOME OF THEM—Feeding Wastes, Diseases from Unsanitary Buildings, Unprotected Machinery. There are others but here are enough to kill the profits on any farm.

The Victory Loan for Claresholm district is nearing the $300,000 mark. Claresholm has done well. So far there is no place in the province that has equalled it. The drive closes Saturday night. No better investment will likely ever be opened to the public.

On Monday afternoon in pursuance of a joyful celebration of the peace news, an auto party had an upset about five miles north of town. All were severely shaken up and bruised, but luckily no bones broken. The car turned twice over and was considerably damaged. Those in the car were Mr. Finstad, Miss Olga Hunsd and Mrs. H. V. Lewis, and Miss Florence Schooley. Miss Sengstad was driving at the time of the accident. Geo. Ringrose happened along soon after the accident and brought the injured to town.

Jack White, proprietor of the Staveland hotel, was arrested last week by Provincial Policemen. Visited on a charge of selling liquor. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs. Wm. For alienating the affections of another man's wife and being too familiar with her, a farmer south of town last Wednesday, was threatened with a coq of tar and feathers. A number of citizens, whose sympathy was with the husband, gave the culprit 30 minutes to get out of town. While the scrap was on the husband secured possession of his child, a boy of 3 years, and in a short time was speeding out of town for some unknown destination. It seems that so far as the husband is concerned the wife can now do as she likes as long as he has the child.

Major Shook returned on Saturday last after a very strenuous trip through the Rockies. As game ward he found that much game was being unlawfully slaughtered by both whites and Indians. He collected skins from these poachers and gave them warning that he believed, would be needed. As canvasser at large for the Victory Loan he sold thousands of dollars' worth of bonds to ranchers and others who could not otherwise have been reached. The money had made the mountain trails almost impassable, and after seeing the wrecked condition of the democracy he used for his outfit, transport, one wonders that the major pulled through the trip alive. The wagon had every spring broken as well as showing numerous other marks of the hard trip.

CLARESHOLM CELEBRATES

When the news was received on Monday morning that Germany had accepted the peace terms proposed by the Allies, there was great rejoicing in Claresholm. Whistles were blown, bells rung, auto horns tooted, fireworks turned loose, and every convenient form of noise brought into action.

In the afternoon a big automobile parade was formed, cars being profusely decorated with flags and bunting. The parade was led by a tractor drawing a float with the large band. The route of the parade was through the principal streets to the park where the band gave a concert of patriotic airs. It is estimated that there were about two hundred cars on the streets.

In the evening big bon fires were lighted at the park and the band again gave a good program of music.

GEO. ADAMS DEAD

We are sorry to have to report the death of Sergt. Geo. Adams, who died at the base hospital in France on October 30, as the result of a gunshot wound in the skull. While in Claresholm he was waiter in Clarke's store, in charge of the grocery department. His mother is Mrs. John Worth, Charlotteville, P.E.I. He was married in England after going over, and leaving a wife and one child. He was a young man whom everyone respected. He will be remembered as one of our fallen heroes. His death is a part of the price of victory.

How Many Crowns for Your Honor Flag?

Of course every city, town and district will earn its Honor Flag.

But how about the crowns?

For every twenty-five per cent. in excess of its quota, each city, town and district will be entitled to add a crown to its flag.

Can you do fifty per cent. better than your quota—that means two crowns for your Honor Flag.

But double your quota and it means four crowns.

Hang a Flag in your hall, that for years to come will show that your city, town or district did better than well—

I am informed that, one of the patients who died in our hospital asked for benefit of clergy and all that could be done for him was done by the orderly who procured a bibi, and assisted him in finding the passage of Scripture he wished for. What is the matter with our ministers and ex ministers? There are a number of other men in the town as well as the preachers who could very well afford some little time as, well as the ladies, yet they don't come through. I mention the ministers in particular, simply because they cannot be so very busy being as their churches are closed and besides I was always of the opinion that men of the cloth were expected to take a leading part in such cases.

"TO WILLIAM, THE KAISER"

And how do you feel today, old William, And how is your pride a standin' When you see our mighty armies a rushin' in To disturb your years of plannin'?

Oh! mark this, cruel William, And may you mark it well, In no so far distant future In your fair domains we shall dwell

Yes, we shall walk ourselves right in, bold William, And on your German soil Shall make you bend to the Allied call, As sure as you are born.

You'll be glad, yes very glad, Our proposals to concede, And we'll name them over one by one, While you're, on bonded knees.

Then will you proudly say, even William, "We and mein Gott" are ever there To stand against our God and us In such a brutal affair?

You're trusted the "ego" all along the bitter way, All the time forgetting a Mightier Hand did away, And that same hand is guarding our boys,

Is pushing them thro' you all like toys, Tho' heaven knows, the fatal blows Have scattered our dear brave men, But war is war, and death is death To gain a well fought end.

Don't fuge, there's a future awaiting you Where such Williams as you do go, And a life of "fire and brimstone" is too good for you know.

Oh! how will you like it suffering William, When the scores of faces, loom

Out of the heaven lit pathway

Where for you there is no room?

A lover of peace and passion And pity you, yes, we do, But after all plying such a fool Is no much pity for you.

From such you thought you would die, But, ah! not for you, simple William, A man who has wrought such shame Must forever and ever

Take unto himself the blame.

Instead of joining in hand claps With men you so utterly wronged, You will live in eternal discomfort, Yes, and your own wretched throng.

They say a fool should be pitied, And pity you, yes, we do, But after all plying such a fool Is no much pity for you.

Th, Time of reckoning is coming, When on this earth you have spent your day, And there will be, no mourning nation As in your cold, cold grave you lay.

Buy rather a happy people Freed from such a devilish Hun, And no happy recollections Of the good deeds you have done.

Just gaze on all, fiendish William, And see what things as they surely will be, When you have safely "Crossed the Bar"

And are, battling with the ever "Mighty sea,"

A new world to you I can picture, Your people all, as, it to Of happiness, peace and contentment When you with this life are there.

By your schemes, your tricks and your treachery

To conquer you fully had thought, But never for one single moment Did you count on our blessed good God

Who for Righteousness ever stands by us

And who will settle this struggle aright, Who will prove in His own good time What is meant by "Aight is Might."

So, now, how do you feel, old William, And how is your pride a standin' When you have seen our armies a rushin' in And have destroyed your years of plannin'?

Dear Mr. Editor:

Just a word in regard to the, hand ling of the "flu" epidemic in our town. Nearly three weeks ago the Health Board ordered that all schools, churches, etc., be closed until orders. At once every teacher on the staff offered their services, toward earning and otherwise helping the ones who were so unfortunate as to be stricken with the disease.

These volunteers are still working in the same spirit and will doubtless continue, to do so until the epidemic is over. Several of the ladies of the town, other than the teaching staff are working every day doing their bit to alleviate the distress at the hospital. The town officials have had some difficulty in getting men to act as orderlies at the hospital even after offering pay. What is the reason? The ladies offer their services without any hint as to return and the men can scarcely be persuaded to do anything even at a price.

We had on, gentlemen who has acted in the capacity of orderlies for some time and refuse any return whatever, only one. As the churches have been closed as well as the schools, it would seem that the sin isters are no more busy than teachers, yet I am informed that some of these Reverend Gentlemen have offered their services.
